Ranch Ehrlo Society chosen as one of Saskatchewan's top employers for 2012

Ranch Ehrlo Society has long been recognized for its strong mandate to help children, youth, and families in our communities. It now has a new distinction – the Ranch has been recognized as one of Saskatchewan's top employers for 2012. This year's winners will be announced on February 1, 2012 in special supplements published by the Regina Leader-Post and the Saskatoon StarPhoenix, as well as online at Eluta.ca

Many people look to make a difference when they decided on a career and at the Ranch, employees do just that. Over its 45-year history, Ranch Ehrlo Society has developed unique and innovative programs to assist children, youth, and families. At the Ranch Ehrlo Society, dedicated youth care workers, directors, unit managers, educational and other professionals are making a difference everyday in the lives of hundreds of youth from across Canada.

"What Ranch Ehrlo does is hard to encapsulate because it simply does so much," said vice-president of administration and quality improvement Carole Bryant.

She added, "What really makes it such a good workplace is that people who work at the Ranch know that they're making a difference in the lives of a lot of people. And there are a lot of wonderful opportunities for our employees whether it is furthering their education, specialized training, or taking advantage of our numerous employment benefits."
